I am not able to log in to Twitter on my mobile nor on my PC (Windows 7) but I can access the application from the web. This is good news for the community of Twitter in India and also Twitter HQ in USA. I have been using Twitter for about eight years and it has been a medium for me to quickly search out trending topics and also for getting updates from my friends and family all over the world. I remember the time before Twitter when I would be on the iPhone and try to search if there was any breaking news or not. I would have to scroll through my friend's inbox to get some kind of update. I also remember the days when I would use the MSN Messenger to catch up with people and stay in touch. I started out in the business world as an Associate Creative Director and I think many of my insights and experiences of working in corporate America have helped me build this platform today, from a very small scale. I think in spite of being

President Obama raised the specter of Hillary Clinton's 2016 presidential campaign Friday at a fundraiser in San Francisco where he said Republicans were determined to keep the White House dark for four more years. "My only concern is I don't want to see Republicans in the White House for four more years," Obama said at the fund-raiser, where he raised $3.4 million for his reelection campaign and the Democratic National Committee. "And I need you all to keep all of us going to the polls." The president offered one of his typical mock-outrage speeches at the event, saying his party's presumptive nominee "just wants to rule.... To hell with everybody." "We just want to go out and fight another bloody, costly war," Obama said. The president also made a brief prediction about the GOP's 2016 presidential primary, predicting that the campaign would more likely be "a smaller-ticket fight." "It's not gonna be like last time, where you had the whole Republican establishment lined up against each other," the president said, referring to the 2000 primary and the ensuing campaign. "I think they're going to break into some smaller fights, more like Elizabeth Warren vs. Scott Brown." Obama mentioned Warren, who will face off against Sen. Scott Brown (R-Mass.) in the Senate race in his home state of Massachusetts in November, as an example of a Democratic contender whose campaign has been too liberal for most Republicans to stomach. "I don't know how she's getting elected," he said. Obama also offered tributes to Newark, N.J. Mayor Cory Booker (D) and San Francisco Mayor Ed Lee (D), both of whom are retiring in the near future. "I want you all to know that I've lived in cities that are more rowdy than this one," Obama said. "But this city means a lot to me, and I know you all care about it, too." Booker, Obama added, "is an awesome mayor, and Ed Lee is an amazing human being who's done great things for this city." Obama later told supporters at the fundraiser that he planned to take a "congressional recess" in October and October and November. He noted that it's not time to fill the vacancies in the new Democratic majorities in the House and Senate. "This is not a time to have a lame duck Congress," the president said. "It
